Market commentary

September was a volatile month for global equities. The MSCI World Index ended the month 2.4% lower in Euro terms. The dollar was strong offsetting declines for Euro based investors. EUR/USD dropped by c.2%, to end the month below the $1.16 level. It was also a negative month for government bonds with both the US 10-year yield and the German 10-year yield rising by nearly 0.2%. A hawkish shift from central banks globally was a notable driver behind the rise in bond yields. Fed Chairman Jerome Powell signalled that the Fed could soon begin reducing the $120bn monthly bond purchases as “substantial further progress” on employment was “all but met”. He noted that another “reasonably good” employment report would be sufficient evidence for him to conclude that the target had been met. The Bank of England was also more hawkish than expected, suggesting it could raise rates by the end of the year. Meanwhile, the potential default of Chinese property developer Evergrande made headlines over the month, with the issue still far from resolved. In Germany, the general election saw no party take a majority, meaning a government may take several weeks before being formed.
